the Near Approach of the Short Session,

nected with their departments. In the arternoon the President devoted several hours to the preparation of his message. It is thought he will make only a brief reference to the peace negotiations at Paris and will leave the details to be covered in a special message to be sent to the Senate in transmitting the treaty.

The President received a present yesterday of the largest cut glass punch bowl ever made. The gift was a personal one and came from J. D. Robinson, of Toledo, Ohio, a Democrat, but an admirer of President McKinley. The bowl is cut to represent the States and Stripes. It bears six shields, each with thirteen stars, to represent the original States of the Union, and the usual number of stripes. Besides these are forty-seven large stars, to stand for the States of the Union. President McKinley, when he first entered the White House, in deference to Mrs. McKinley's wishes, did not allow wine to be used on his table. This rule has now been changed, so there is a good prospect that it was when the sales frequently were less than 100,000 shares per day.

It seems to be the current belief in Wall Street that with the prosperity of the country the volume of business in Wall Street, which is the financial centre, will can will and well distributed. Americans are good speculators, and many dollars from an well distributed. Americans are good speculators, and many dollars from an well street for speculative purposes. The enormous increase in wealth, as shown by the rise in stock values, will tend to speculative purposes.

Secretary John D. Long, after spending Thanksgiving week at his home at Hingnaun Mass., returned to Washington to the day. When told of a rumer that he was Lin about to resign, he laughed heartily. "That is the first that I have heard of it." said he, "and I can assure you that there is no foundation for it. So far as I know, there are no changes contemplated in the President's Cabinet."

Mr. Wilson, the Secretary of Agriculture, has just completed his annual report, p which will this year be of more than orinary interest. He took the first copy of he document and presented it to the Presi-ent this morning.

President this morning. The Senator is an received earnest advocate of the policy of expansion, and ridicules the idea that any harm could come to the United States from its acquisition of the Philippines. "I take no stock," he said, "in these lamentable predictions that we have entered on the downward road because we have departed from our traditional policy."

The entire fashionable world of Washington turned out this afternoon to the debut put a kee of Miss Rose Marie Sartoris, who was successfully launched in society by her grand- ba mother, Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant, at the latmother, Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant, at the latter's residence in Massachusetts avenue.

"Every one" was there, from the Vice-President and Mrs. Hobart, the British Ambassador and Lady Fauncefote, down through the ranks of the prominent officials and diplomats.

The debutante was fairly overwhelmed with bouquets, baskets and clusters of the costlest flowers to be had within the city limits, not excluding the White House conservatories. She, a tall, fine looking blonde, wore a soft white dress of sliken texture, and carried on her left arm what is undoubtedly the latest fad in the way of debutante bouquets, a great cluster of nephotis roses tied with broad white satin bows.

Mrs. Grant, in a dress of silver gray poulte de soie, stood by her granddaughter. Miss Vivian Sartoris, whose coming-out tea two seasons since was a forerunner of the one this afternoon, wore a dress of rose-pluk brocade. She assisted her mother in entertaining the gnests.

In the tea room Miss Davidge, whose engagement to young Algernon Sartoris was announced at the close of the late war, sorved cafe frappe from the opposite end of the pink-decorated table at which Miss Patton poured tea. This tea was quite a feature of the afternoon, inasmuch at it was part of that presented to Mrs. Grant by li Hung Chang on his recent visit to Washington.

Washington, Nov. 30 .- Bishop Henry Y. Washington, Nov. 30.—Bishop Henry Y. Satteriee, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, has just finished the erection of a private chapel in his residence. It is the first of the kind in Washington and has a seating capacity of fifty to seventy-five persons. The altar is in green and gold with gorgeous silken hangings and draperles. The central point of interest is a large cross of selld silver, elaborately carved. At the opposite end of the chapel is an immense painting in color of the Episcopal coat of arms.

Family prayers are held by Bishop Satterlee in this place every day. Here all marriages that take place at the Bishop's residence are performed and special services are occasionally held.

Ing. President McKinley would know that the session of Congress was near at hand from the number of Senators and Representatives who call on him each day. Besides other visitors, he received this morning Senators Fairbanks, Teller, Hale, Chandler and Lodge, Representatives Hill-born and Loud, of California; Tawney, of Minnesota, and Alexander, of Buffalo, N. Y.

The President spent some time separately with Secretaries Hay, Long, Wilson and Alger on matters of detail connected with their departments. In the afternoon the President devoted several hours to the preparation of his message.
